While the premise sounds simple—defeat the enemy combat vehicles or capture their bases—World of Tanks Blitz is a fascinatingly deep experience that requires careful strategy in each lightning-fast battle. A buzzing multiplayer community and well-designed in-game chat make it easy to work together, whether you're flanking foes in a snowy trainvard or scouting from the sweeping vistas of a rural countryside. With a complex upgrade system and more than 90 tanks that represent Germany, the United States, and the USSR, you'll find plenty to unlock as you hone your skills. Well.. for a while my first complaint was how rigged this game is. It really takes a lot of the fun out of it. But the straw that broke the camels back so to speak is the unfairness and the injustice that seemingly comes a long with it. My fiancé has been playing for a few years and is pretty much always one of the top players. Today he was reported for " unsupportive man like conduct." Which clearly makes no sense because HE was the one being bullied by another player. So why would world of tanks ban someone else who is being bullied? That would be like two kids on a play ground, one is the bully and the overseers" and you don't even take time to punish the right person or review cases properly?? I'd love an explanation but I'm sure we will never get one except for the usual automative response. Which is completely lame. I hope that eventually you'll find a better systemOr better people to work "behind the scene" As for now this game lost a great player. For people interested in playing this, I'd honestly think about spending my time else where. You'll just loose time here. and you can be creative on how you try to win and use your tank. I can't think of any better game or even one close to this one. It really takes tanks to new levels. However, when the new update comes out (update 8.0) it will add some cool new tanks that would seem fun to use, but two of these tanks remind me of the old sports car like tanks the "BT series's " because these two American tanks can move backwards with their tracks broken and the " BT series " had the ability to move forward and backwards without any tracks. If you were to add that new thing to the BT tanks, I would appreciate this game a ton more but I would understand how that would make the " BT series " too supreme since it's a tier three light tank. I respect the game a lot but maybe wot blitz could find a way to make something LIKE this happen. Update 8.1 came out and it seems good except for one thing. When I played the game, I had no account connected to my player so when I got back on the game after the update, it got rid of it! I wish war gaming did not do that. I still love the game but they need to pay more attention to what they do. If you are reading this, make sure to have an account attached to your feedback. We will certainly take it into account for future patches. Please do note that while this does not automatically mean that your suggestion will be implemented in the next update, all feedback is highly appreciated! Good luck on the battlefield!
